

August 20, 2008

The information included in this update is compiled from data supplied by the FAA on its website and is current as of July 31, 2008.

Any identifier changes have been made.

If you use the airport identifier to locate an airport in your GPS, it won't be found if your database isn't up to date.

Telephone numbers have been updated, if different.

I also included airports which, although they have no runway with a turf surface, have indicated in their remarks that there is a turf area adjacent to a runway that can be used for landing. These are identified by entries with "Adj." in the runway length column.

The manager's phone number is listed for each airport. I would suggest calling before using the airport, especially if the landing area is adjacent to the runway (make sure it has been mowed or isn't too soft).

You can use the identifier to check for all information about the airport using the following websites:

www.airnav.com

www.qcr1.com/5010web/

Aeroplanner on www.eaa.org or any other web site you have access to that shows airport information.

Corrections and additions are welcome. Before sending additions, please check one of the above websites. The airport will only be shown if the runway surface is turf, dirt, gravel or turf-asphalt, or if the remarks indicate that aircraft operations are permitted on a turf area adjacent to a runway and avgas is sold. There are probably airports with grass runways, which have fuel for their own use, but choose not to advertise fuel sales to transient aircraft.

If the airport in question doesn't show the above information, contact the airport manager and ask him to make the appropriate change to the airport record that is submitted to the FAA.

Kris
